WESTERLY TOWN COUNCIL MEETS

Short Session Monday to be Supplemented by Meeting Wednesday Evening to Carvass License Vote—Mrs. Joseph Leonardi Badly Burned While Trying to Save Small Daughter—Fines in North Stonington for Illegal Hunting.

The shortest regular session of the Westery town council, for the past decade at least, was that held Monday, which lasted just forty minutes, most of that time being consumed by the reading of the minutes and approval of the payment of bills. President Flynn jocularly remarked that the short session might possibly be due to the absence of Councilmen Robertson and Fowler, and the tardiness of Councilman Larkin.

A bill of $27 for shrubbery at the main entrance to the town hall, caused a few remarks. Councilmen Flynn and Haswell stated that local florists had complained for not being asked to make bids for the work, rather than have the shrubs supplied by a non-resident. The matter was wholly with Town Clerk Whipple who stated that if local dealers desired to furnish the ornamental shrubs, they ought to have come forward with the suggestion that resulted in the ornamentation.

The annual appropriation of $200 for the Memorial and Library association was ordered to be paid over to the board of trustees. Lewis Stanton, superintendent of health, reported two cases of infantile paralysis during October. Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown reported thirteen arrests during October, eight for intoxication, two insane, and one each for cruelty to animals, tramp and common drunkard. A representative of the International Monday at the Triple Link fair was a big night, with over 400 present. A large delegation came from Mohegan and Pawcatuck lodges, Osprey and Orient Rebekah lodges of New London. Visitors were also present from Westery, Groton and Norwich. The program carried out was as follows: Vocal solo, Miss Kreh; recitation, Theodore Johnson; cornet and piano duet, Miss Inez Button and Philip J. Bulwer, Jr.; vocal solo, Miss Carson; recitation, Miss Johnson; violin solo, Clarence Spink; clarinet solo, Mr. Weimers. Election returns will be received tonight.

Car Overturned.

Mrs. John Finnegan and daughters, Misses Grace and Carrie Finnegan, of Ledyard, and Mrs. Justin Denison and two children went to Providence Saturday in Mrs. Finnegan's automobile and spent the day with Mrs. Carl Cutler of that city, formerly of Mystic. On their return home, when near Washington, R. I., the machine hit a stone and the car was overturned. All were pinned under the machine. A number of men were returning from work and went to their rescue, succeeding in getting all out safely. The car was somewhat damaged, but it was taken to the garage and after some work done on it the party proceeded. The damage to the car and the shaking up summed up the results of the accident.

at Bible Students' association, asked for the free use of the town hall for one week, to make an exhibit of a plan for salvation, with the aid of moving pictures. The admission would be free but books would be offered for sale and a collection taken to meet expenses. It was argued that the moving picture feature would violate the insurance contracts, and further that if this exhibit was of a purely religious and undenominational nature it would have the approval of some of the churches, and provision made for its production in a church edifice. The matter was referred to the custodian of the building and the request will be denied.

The council will meet again next Wednesday evening in compliance with law, and act as a returning board on the votes cast Tuesday on the liquor license question.

Mrs. Joseph Leonardi and her nearly three years old daughter Nellie, of 118 Central Park, were severely burned late Saturday afternoon, and there is doubt as to the recovery of the child. The little girl was playing with some matches in the back yard, when her clothing became ignited, and the mother rushed to the rescue and, regardless of herself, finally extinguished the flame. The mother was burned in the hands and arms, and very severely in the right hand. Nearly all the clothing of the child was burned as was also her form, from head to foot, and late Monday she was in a critical condition. Dr. Scanlon was summoned and alleviated their suffering as much as possible.

No democrat has been elected to office in Westery for more than ten years, and then only on a combination-citizens-ticket, when three were elected to the town council.

After the ballots are counted the Westery Board of Trade will take possession of the town hall and receive election returns tonight. The hall will be open to the public.

"I don't believe there are enough democrats and sour-milk republicans in the town to defeat Langworthy for the state senate, but Babcock may give him a close rub, at that," is the way a prominent republican put it Monday.

The only matters upon which the republican party of Westery is divided in today's election is on the liquor license question and as to whether Maurice W. Flynn or Samuel H. Davis, both republicans, will represent the Second district in the next general assembly.

With the exception of a few individual contests for the general assembly, the election is so one-sided in Westery that there is not a tinge of excitement as to the local result. Were every town in the country like Westery politically, Hughes would be practically elected unanimously.

Special Fish and Game Protectors Hill and Stoddard went into the woods of Central Falls Sunday, seeking for gamesters who were hunting for game on that day in violation of law. They arrested Jesse Fish and Robert Adams, and preferred charges against them before Justice of the Peace Chapman in North Stonington. They were penalized as the law directs.

NORWICH TOWN

Former Resident, Charles Cleveland, Recalled by Boston Paper—Rev. George H. Ewing Gives Illustrated Address—Charles Vergason Injured.

A recent Boston paper describing the 100th anniversary of the City Missionary society states that it was organized at the home of Charles Cleveland an eminent banker, and confided to his care. He was a noted personality who left his home in Norwich, Conn., at the age of thirteen, rode on horseback on a pillion behind his uncle to his home in Boston, and engaged in the brokerage business in Boston he published a set of exchange tables giving the exchange of dollars and cents from one penny to five thousand pounds. These tables are still in use, both in this country and in England, and a copy of them is preserved in the British Museum. One of his sisters was the mother of Bishop Arthur Cleveland Coxe, another was the mother of William Earl Dodge, a noted philanthropist of New York.

Charles Cleveland was the son of Aaron Cleveland whom Miss Caulkins described "as a man of wonderful versatility of talent, a noted dweller upon Bean Hill." Here in the house now occupied by Remus Stanton, Charles Cleveland was born June 21, 1778, and in 1855 was at the age of 77 years, living in Boston energetic and useful. He started the first primary schools in the country, the first work for women, for prisoners, for Africans, Germans and Chinese.

Illustrated Lecture. A good number were present at the stereopticon lecture on Home Missions given Sunday evening at the First Congregational church by Rev. G. H. Ewing. Dudley Lathrop was in charge of the stereopticon and clear pictures were thrown upon the screen. Most interesting was the picture description of Home Mission work among Swedes, Armenians, Hungarians, Italians and Germans. There were group pictures of C. E. societies, and of leaders, also views of the first church established in a place and more recent churches built there. Pictures were shown of those among the foreign born population, graduates from American schools and colleges, who have won distinction and eminence, and have gone back to work
